Conference track «The English-speaking world and the East: linguacultural perspective»

The American Cauldron: Migration from Asia to the USA.

Научный руководитель – Мельникова Надежда Владимировна

Гаравская Дарья Андреевна
Student (bachelor)
Московский государственный университет имени М.В.Ломоносова, Юридический факультет, Кафедра международного права, Москва, Россия
E-mail: 18062005d@mail.ru

Migration from Asia to the Americas is a multifaceted phenomenon with deep historical roots and relevance in the modern world.

Over the course of more than two hundred years of American history, migration from Asia has had 3 waves: starting in the 19th century, when Filipinos, Chinese and Japanese began to arrive, then the period after World War II and the present time. Each wave has its own events and factors that contributed to migration processes. The following key reasons are listed: economic conditions, political instability, social changes in Asian countries [1, 4].

The migration process from Asia, along with negative ones, undoubtedly has positive phenomena, and is mutually beneficial for both sides [1, 4]. Considering the negative aspects, it is worth mentioning human rights violations, unacceptable living conditions for migrants, the creation of organized criminal groups, intercultural clashes, illegal border crossings and the consequences of these factors for the future of America [5].

Along with this, it is impossible to deny the contribution of Asian migrants to the economic development of America, their cultural influence, the integration of traditions and customs that have influenced American society. There are examples of Asian success related to business creation, innovation and active participation of migrants in various labor markets [1, 3, 4].

The positive contribution of Asian migrants to the development of America demonstrates the importance of work aimed at the safety and legal security of migrants, which is necessary to preserve the image of America as a country of opportunity [1, 2].

The work on the protection of human rights relating to immigrants from Asia, including legal mechanisms for the protection of their interests is enormously important. Moreover, the activities to identify human rights violations among this population and the role of the state and non-governmental organizations in their protection are relevant [5].

Against this background, it is necessary to consider the latest reforms of the US immigration policy, analyze the success and shortcomings of these reforms in terms of protecting the rights of legal and illegal immigrants, ensuring the country's security and creating support for new arrivals [4, 5].

It is necessary to analyze future trends in relation to Asian immigrants in America, taking into account current conditions and historical background, to predict how the flows of individual groups of immigrants will develop based on changes in policies and economic conditions [2, 3, 5].

References

1) Yu.Y. Komlyakova, Problems of emigration of the population of Asian countries to the United States // Scientific Vedomosti, History Series. Political Science 2016 No1 (222) Issue 37, 51

2) G.I. Gadzhimuradov, K.O. Sumin, Migration Policy as a Factor of Influence on the Presidential Elections in the United States, article by MGIMO, Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Russia

3) N.N. Bureiko, The Impact of Migration on the Process of Formation of the American National Identity ISSN 2308-8079. Studia Humanitatis. 2013. № 3. www.st hum.ru

4) Z.S. Chertina, The Melting Pot. Paradigms of Ethnic Development of the USA. Russian Academy of Sciences, Institute of World History. – Moscow, 2000. – 163 p.

5) G.K. Iskakova, The Central Asian Region in the Strategy of the USA, Russia and China // PolitBook 3 - 2012